ABOUT UPM

When was UPM established?

Universiti Putra Malaysia (UPM) was first established on 21st May 1931 by John Scott, an administrative officer of the Straits Settlements. Then named the School of Agriculture, only two kinds of programmes were on offer: a three-year diploma programme and a one-year certificate course. The School was then renamed the College of Agriculture Malaya by Sir Edward Gent, the Governor of the Malayan Union, on 23rd June 1947. Just a year later, it was proposed that the college be upgraded to a university, but the declaration of an Emergency later that put the plan on hold. Nevertheless, the role of the college began to become more significant, in line with the rapid growth of the country's agricultural sector - leading to the then Prime Minister, Tun Abdul Razak Hussein envisioning the establishment of an agricultural university when officiating extensions to the college structure in 1969. This vision eventually came to fruition with the founding of Universiti Pertanian Malaysia in 1973.

This borderless campus, reflected in the name change from Universiti Pertanian Malaysia to Universiti Putra Malaysia in 1997, by the then Prime Minister Dato' Seri Dr. Mahathir Mohamad. Today, UPM is on its way to becoming a university of international repute, boasting the highest percentage of academic staff with PhD qualifications among local universities in Malaysia, and students from over 70 countries around the world. ABOUT MALAYSIA

What are the major cultural features of Malaysia?

Malaysia is comprised of a myriad ethnic and cultural groups, all of whom maintain distinct cultural identities to a large extent. The major ethnic groups in the country are Malays, Chinese and Indians, with the majority practising the official religion, Islam. Although these ethnic groups still preserve their own languages and dialects, Malay is a spoken by all Malaysians, and English by many. Malaysia also houses people from a wide variety of other cultures from around the world, who are in the country for business, work or study purposes - as a case in point, UPM alone has students from over 70 countries.

What is the weather like?

Given that Malaysia is located on the equator, the country has a tropical climate, with an annual average temperature of about 27 degree celcius, as well as high rainfall (250cm) and humidity (70-90%) throughout the year.

What about travel and clothing?

Given the weather, it is impractical to travel long distances by foot. As such, a number of public transportation services are available, from taxis and buses, to intra- and inter-city trains. While intra-city trains, such as the RapidKL Light Rail Transit and Monorail trains mostly serve dwellers within the capital city of Kuala Lumpur, many townships and cities are connected by the KTM Komuter trains, including Serdang.

As for the clothing, Malaysians generally dress in light clothing in non-formal contexts, due to the hot climate. It must be noted, however, that modesty is a prized virtue in Malaysia, and wearing clothes that are too revealing in public is not recommended.

What are some other cultural do's and don'ts?

Many of politeness rituals that are practised in many countries throughout the world are also practised in Malaysia. However, one very important aspect of interpersonal communication among Malaysians is 'face' - try to avoid making the person you are talking to 'lose face' by deliberately humiliating, embarrassing or berating them in public, even if you feel there is cause and opportunity for you to do so. Another important point of departure from interpersonal communication in many countries is touching. Besides shaking and other hand greetings, touching from people who are not close friends or family members - especially if both parties are from opposite sexes - is generally considered rude. One of the most important cultural aspect that must be adhered to is the removal of shoes in homes and places of worship, unless explicitly told that it is not necessary. This is rivalled only by mocking people's religious or cultural beliefs, which should not be avoided at all costs.

The practice of gift-giving is also governed by certain cultural rituals. For the most part, gift giving is usually reserved for close friends and family, but a token door gift - usually in the form of food items - is acceptable when invited to a person's home. As is the case with any cash transactions within the country, it is of great significance that gifts be given with the right hand instead of the left. The choice of packaging is also highly symbolic - it is safest to avoid the colours white, black and yellow, as these signify mourning, death and royalty respectively. Additionally, avoid giving gifts that are likely to offend religious sensibilities, such as giving alcohol to Muslims, or beef dishes to Buddhists and Hindus.

If Malaysia is such a melting pot of cultures, there must be many public holidays.

This is true, since Malaysia is famous (or to certain employers, infamous) for having many public holidays. In addition to Independence Day (Hari Merdeka, 31 August) and certain universal public holidays, such as Labour Day and New Year's Day, two days are generally given for Hari Raya and Chinese New Year, as well as a day each for Hari Raya Haji (Eid ul-Adha), Awal Muhamarram, Maulidur Rasul, Deepavali and Christmas. Other holidays are determined at the state level, with each state having power to decide which days to take off. For instance, the Hindu festival of Thaipusam is celebrated in Selangor, while the Dayak harvesting festival Hari Gawai is celebrated in East Malaysia. As is the case with any other country's celebrations, expect productivity to come to a standstill and shopping malls to be filled to capacity in the days leading to major holidays!

What do Malaysians eat?

Malaysian dishes are diverse, reflecting the many cultures that make up Malaysia. Also, the different regions of the country have signature dishes that are identifiable by the names of the dishes themselves. Overwhelmingly, however, these dishes are rice-based - and contain a lot of chili! Food is available at all price ranges, depending on where you are expect to pay anywhere you are - expect to pay anywhere between RM 4 and RM 30 for a full meal, depending on the quality and location of the restaurant. Additionally, dishes from neighbouring countries, especially Thailand and Indonesia, can be found all over the country, as well as basic Western dishes. And of late, an increasing number of Arabian, Persian and African restaurants can be found in the larger towns of Malaysia.

Does UPM provide medical services for its students?

Yes it does. This is provided by the University Health Centre (Pusat Kesihatan Universiti, PKU), which caters to the medical needs of the University's students. Besides being equipped to perform full medical examinations and basic health and dental check-ups, the centre also offers physiotherapy, ambulance dispensary and laboratory services. Do I have to pay for these medical services?

The medical fees are included by default into your semester fees, and cover outpatient clinic services provided by PKU. Also keep in mind that your semester fees also includes a health insurance scheme. All new and current international students are required by the Ministry of Higher Education Malaysia (MOHE) and the Immigration Department Malaysia (IMI) to take up this comprehensive health insurance scheme, which covers personal accident and death, hospitalisation at private hospitals, and repatriation. Students also have the option to include accompanying family members/ dependants in this scheme.

Does the PKU offer specialist treatment?

As it is a medical centre and not a hospital per se, the PKU does not provide specialist treatment. However, students can obtain specialist treatment at public and university hospitals with referral from PKU. Note that additional charges may be incurred for specialist treatments at these hospitals.

Security

I am new in the country, so who do I turn to in case anything unfortunate occurs?

Your first stop for any security concerns and issues should always be the Security Department of UPM (Bahagian Keselamatan Universiti, BKU). BKU, which is in charge of on-campus security, is the only service entity that has managed to achieve MS ISO 9001:2000 certification. And as noted above, BKU also handles the registration of vehicles that are allowed in campus, so as to ensure that no undesirable elements from the outside are able to threaten the well-being of students.

RECREATIONAL ACTIVITIES

UNIVERSITI
MALAYSIA

I can't stay indoors and study all of the time. Are there any sport activities in UPM that I can take part in?

There are almost too many to mention! Most of the sporting facilities are located in the UPM Sports Complex, which are usually free for use for all students of UPM, provided there are no official activities or events taking place at the time. The UPM Sports Complex boasts an Olympic running track, a football stadium, badminton courts, squash courts, sepak takraw courts, tennis courts, hockey fields, swimming pools, an archery range, and a gym. More information on the range of facilities available, conditions for use, and a location map can be found on the UPM Sports Complex website:

www.i-sukan.upm.edu.my

Besides the Sports Complex, however, sports activities are also take place in other parts of the university. Most of these activities are centred in the residential college areas, where students regularly partake in football, rugby, basketball, futsal, volleyball and badminton, or use the jogging tracks and gyms to keep fit. Additionally, the Faculty of Educational Studies boasts a swimming pool and wall-climbing activities.

Of course, the UPM sporting activities is arguably most famous for are gold and horse-riding. All UPM students are eligible to become members of the UPM's sprawling 9-hole golf course, or can hire the course for one-off daily usage, at prices that are just a fraction of golf clubs elsewhere in the country. Horse-riding lessons, meanwhile, are conducted by the Equine Unit. There are 12 horses brought in from Australia that fit for riding at the Unit. See the Gold and Equine Unit pages on the main UPM website:

www.upm.edu.my

What about other recreational activities?

It would be remiss of you not to visit the UPM Agricultural Park, so as to have a better feel for the historical significance of agriculture to the University. Also, you can choose to take a stroll through the many farms and pastures of UPM and MARDI, or even visit one of the many exhibitions (not all agriculture-related) at the Malaysia Agro Exposition Park Serdang (MAEPS). One additional feature that has become synonymous with UPM is popularly known as 'One Tree Hill' on Bukit Expo, which is a favourite of many photographers (even wedding photographers!).

If you're looking to take your kids to a theme park for a fun weekend, the closest would be The Mines Wonderland in the Mines Resort City. You can also visit the Sunway Lagoon theme park in Sunway, as well as the Desa WaterPark and Berjaya Times Square Theme Park. Or if you're in the mood for some nature in the midst of the urban sprawl, you can visit the many parks and gardens in nearby Putrajaya, or even the bird, butterfly and deer parks next to the Titiwangsa Lake Gardens in Kuala Lumpur.

If Malaysians enjoy shopping so much, there must be a lot of shopping malls nearby.

There are so many, that there is a Wiki page on the list of shopping malls in Malaysia! Kuala Lumpur itself is inundated with many shopping malls, from more exclusive, high-end stores such as Pavilion, to all-inclusive malls such as Midvalley, to novelty and bargain shopping malls, such as Sungei Wang Plaza. The second largest convergence of malls is in the neighbouring city of Petaling Jaya, whose malls include 1Utama, Paradigm and The Curve.

There are a number of malls that should fulfil all your basic shopping needs closer to the University, namely IOI City Mall, The Mines, South City and AEON in Seri Kembangan, as well as Alamanda Shopping Centre in Putrajaya. As for your daily grocery shopping, there are also a number of retail supermarkets nearby, such as BIG Super Market in Sri Serdang, the Giant supermarkets in Equine Park, Alamanda and The Mines, as well as Cold Storage in Alamanda. Or if you're looking for something smaller to do your daily shopping , there are mini marts and sundry shops in almost every commercial area in Serdang, as well as the 'pasar malam' (night market) in Sri Serdang on Monday and Friday evenings.
